SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.....

Except for the success of ideas, enabled by detailed planning and concluded in exhaustive work, the negative forces of this area would have stopped the Milam events of the past decade, stopped as events had been for most of a century.

NOW-NOW-NOW

I am lucky. As a high school tennis player, I taught a couple of eighth graders in Northern Indiana the fundamentals. Our bunch thought they were pretty good, the 28 straight dual match wins at schools from East Chicago to Fort Wayne, the several varsity players going to colleges and universities in Texas, Missouri, Illinois and Ohio. I played doubles one summer with a former Michigan juniors champion around metro Northern Indiana. We had Davis Cuppers in the Big 8 and a number of tennis veterans who would be playing the WCT circuit for the kind of money Lamar Hunt pays.

I was in the same Army unit a year or two after Tut Bartzan left Army tennis to return to amateur ranks as a stylist on the level of Australia's Ken Rosewall. Fort Sill had post championships with National Juniors Champions having trouble getting into the semi-finals. But I never forgot those two eighth graders who learned something about forehand, backhand, serve and volley. The name was Truex. And they were identical twins, one quite husky, the other diminutive if not scrawny.

When I was at Mizzou, I started reading about the scrawny one. He lettered his freshman year in the mile in this Northern Indiana town. His sophomore year, he grew to about 5-4 and outran his whole district schedule undefeated. His junior year he won the Indiana school-boy mile in open competition and his senior year he set the the national school-boy record in the mile, something around 4:12 which at the time was sensational.

The community sent him to Scandinavia the summer between his junior and senior years in high school to run in the woods with the great Gundar Haag, who came close years earlier to breaking the 4-minute mile when it was a psychological barrier.

Southern California gave Truex full track scholarship and he ran cross country and two-mile distances. At about 5-6, he simply couldn't match the kicks of the 6-footers who finally broke the 4-minute barrier.

But Truex won a lot of 2-mile events for USC. He continued to run in the Air Force. And he ran close seconds in such indoor events as Philadelphia's Wana-maker Mile.

And he went to the 1960 Olympics and finished about fifth in the 5,000 metres against the world's best. And pound for pound, he was the best.

He was a class performer. If I had been really observant, I would have suspected something when the little guy was still standing after everybody else wanted to quit tennis practice.

Didn't Miss A Day

The five children of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Jensen of Thorndale each received a perfect attendance award at a recent awards assembly at the school. Someone remarked that the parents should also be given a citation, for keeping five children healthy, happy, free of childhood diseases and minor injuries so that they could attend school every day.

Murder Charge Filed

A 22-year-old military policeman at Ford Hood was charged Thursday with murder in the death of his 14-month-old daughter. The child died Friday due to asphyxia caused by vomit in her throat after her skull had been fractured, said the justice of the peace. The father was arrested Tuesday following investigation by a youth division police officer.

Youths Attack Supervisor

A 59-year-old activities supervisor at the Gatesville State School escaped serious injury when he was attacked by two students last Saturday in one of the dormitories. His assailants took his keys and made a getaway in his car. A statewide alert was sounded, but as of Wednesday officers had found no trace of the two escapees or the car.

Up, Up & Away

Hot air balloon riders will be a part of the Family Fun Carnival for Belton's July 4th Fest, according to the chairman. Plans are to secure the balloon by four safety lines, to allow it to rise and descent in one area of the Belton High School parking lot. Rides will be offered to the general public.

Noises Shatter Quiet

A McGregor farmer was surprised when he went out to investigate a rumbling noise and found a huge balloon a few feet from the ground in a pasture. Evidently the balloonist had intended to land and changed his mind when he saw the tall weeds and cockle burrs. He was pouring the fire to his machine, in an attempt to regain altitude. Another noise drove the farmer outside a little later, and he found three peacocks running on the roof -- and he still doesn't know where they came from.

Injunction Halts Concert

At the request of Williamson County commissioners, a district judge issued an injunction to stop Killeen promoters from putting on a June 18 outdoor rock concert on a 320-acre ranch near Florence unless the promoters prove they have met health and safety standards. Commissioners, with strong memories of chaos created by a Willie Nelson picnic two years ago, were in no mood to accept promises from the promoters.

Four Persons Injured In Traffic Mishaps

Injuries were suffered by four persons in two accidents which occurred Wednesday and Thursday, according to investigating officers.

H.O. Roper of Rockdale suffered a broken leg and facial cuts when his pickup hit a barricade at a utility construction site on Highway 79, veered off the road and struck a tree.

The accident, which occurred at 11:30 a.m., was investigated by Charlie West of the sheriff's department. Roper was trapped for awhile in his truck then taken to a Rockdale hospital before being transferred to the VA hospital in Temple.

Both drivers and a passenger were injured at 8:30 a.m. Thursday when their vehicles collided at the intersection of FM 437 and FM 1328 near Davilla.

Greer Gibson of Minerva was treated for chest injuries in a Rockdale hospital and the passenger in his pickup, Ronald Groteau of Thorndale, was treated for a shoulder injury. The other driver, Mrs. Lorene Gersbach of Buckholts, was treated and released from a Temple hospital.

DPS Trooper Scott Douglas investigated the mishap.

Office Open At City Hall For Paving Signup

An office has been set up at City Hall for persons living on streets in the paving program to come in and sign up, said Bonnie Stewart, representative of Texas Securities Corp., which is financing the paving.

Hours will be from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Stewart said it is important for both husband and wife to come in and sign the contract. Those unable to come in should call City Hall and a field representative will be sent out, Stewart said.

She added that blocks that sign up first will paved first.

Residents can contract for up to five years for payment of the paving, if desired. No payment will be due until ten days after the street is completed and accepted by the city.

'Hotline' Open For Questions On Referendum

Texas cattle producers who have questions about the national beef referendum can call a toll-free "hotline" and get answers to any questions they may have about the proposal.

Registration in the first national beef referendum began last week and will continue at ASCS offices through June 17. Actual voting will be July 5-15 at the ASCS offices.

Producers with questions can call, toll-free, 1-800-682-4106 for additional information on the referendum.

Two Folk Fete Queens Crowned

A capacity crowd filled Methodist Fellowship Hall Thursday evening to see two Folk Fete queens crowned as part of the annual Folk Fete which was held over the weekend.

Cameron girls took the top honors, with Tracy Barr named senior queen and Melanie Wright, junior queen. Tracy is the daughter of Mrs. Carol Barr and Neil Barr and Melanie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wright.

First runnerup in the senior queen contest was Joni Wilkerson of Cameron and second runnerup was Barbara Harwell, also of Cameron. Other contestants were Eleanor Svetlik or Buckholts and Janice Schlechte of Thorndale.

There were 21 contestants for junior queen, with Vicki Vaculin of Cameron selected first runnerup and Lori McGregor of Cameron, second runnerup.

Judges included Kathy Tooker of Temple, Roscoe Harrison of Austin Mike McDonald of Temple Junior College and Jodi Grant of Waco. Master of ceremonies was Max Tooker of KCEN-TV, Temple, who kept the affair running at a smooth pace.

Entertainment for the evening included songs and guitar by Julie Smitherman and Judith Moore, a dance by last year's queen Leslie Luecke, and two dances by Kim Branch of the Jodi Grant Studio in Waco. Jane Smith was pianist for the affair.

Both queens were crowned by Miss Luecke.

Mrs. Regina Hairston was chairman for the event, and said the capacity crowd enjoyed the evening and termed the contest a big success.

Kubiak Raps Leaders For School Bill Snafu

AUSTIN

Declaring that the leadership in the Legislature was on the "wrong track", Rep. Dan Kubiak stated that it was theoretically impossible to expect legislators to agree on a school finance plan before a special session convenes.

The Governor stated earlier last week that he would not call a special session unless at least two-thirds of the legislators agree on a school finance bill beforehand.

"It is time that the leadership in the House, Senate and Executive Office give Texas taxpayers something more than lip service in answering school finance problems", pointed out Kubiak.

"Had the same leadership that virtually forced through the highway funding bill been put behind a school finance package, we wouldn't have reached the crisis in Texas' education system that we have today."

The Rockdale legislator went on to relate that the school finance bill passed in 1975 was simply a two-year plan -- a stop-gap measure until a better plan could be drawn up. By September of this year, the hold-harmless clause in the measure will be repealed, and many school districts will be faced with an increase in property taxes beyond reasonable levels -- which could result in pitting urban taxpayers against rural taxpayers.

"With a priority issue like school finance which affects every citizen in Texas, how in the Devil can legislators come back to the Capitol with their minds made up for them by someone else. We legislators have a duty and obligation to the people in our own district. We should not return to Austin to vote on a proposal that has been formulated by a small group of people outside of public scrutiny," Kubiak countered.

"This just seems to me like another ploy to push an equitable school finance plan aside in order to get something passed, therefore taking the pressure off of the State's leadership. I think it is totally unjust to Texas taxpayers to expect that this type of haphazard solution will solve the pressing school finance problems facing Texans today."

Bell On Alert For Hurricanes

Radar screens of the U.S. Weather Service since June 1 have been picking up shapely blips that translate into female terrors bearing names like Clara and Grace.

Bred usually in the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico, the Caribbean and the South Atlantic, these tempestuous sirens of nature are called hurricanes in eastern waters and typhoons in the far Pacific.

One's as bad as the other, and the Weather Service says the Texas Coast is overdue for such a visitor.

The last hurricane to hit the Coastal Bend was in 1970, when Hurricane Celia struck near Corpus Christi, causing an estimated $450 million in damage.

When a hurricane heads for the Texas Coast, Dennis Richter, Taylor manager for Southwestern Bell, will be among those watching her course.

"The very thing people need in such a disaster -- telecommunications -- is usually hit hard by a hurricane," Richter said. "We have to send people from there into the stricken area ahead of the storm in order to survey the damage and begin restoration once the storm abates."

Richter said there's no foolproof method of knowing when or where a hurricanemight strike, but precautionary measures must be taken.

"The phone company and Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit for the Bell System, began preparing for the current hurricane season several months ago," the manager said.

To prepare for the season, which lasts from June 1 to November 30, Western Electric began stockpiling a variety of emergency supplies such as gloves, clamps, telephone cable, splicing tools and about two dozen other items needed to restore phone service in hurricane-stricken areas, the manager said.

"The phone company's operating departments also have made tentative plans to send experienced personnel to the Gulf Coast should a hurricane decide to strike."

Preliminary plans become more concrete when a storm appears in the Gulf. "When it becomes apparent the storm will hit the U.S. Coast, repair crews, engineers and operators from Southwestern Bell and neighboring Bell System companies are sent to the coastal area.

"The idea is to get people in while you can, so they can see how extensive the damage is as soon as the storm passes. With uniform Bell System practices and equipment, they immediately can work hand-in-hand with local telephone people to restore normal service," Richter said.

The manager said each deadly storm is carefully watched and plotted from phone company "war rooms" as she constantly changes directions and velocity.

"In these special conference rooms located throughout Texas, employees maintain a day-by-day and sometimes hour-by-hour watch on these potentially dangerous females as they develop during the hurricane season," the manager pointed out.

"Repair crews, along with emergency restoration equipment sent in from Western Electric supply houses throughout the country, wait out the storm. As the weather subsides, the massive chore of restoring communications begins," he said.

MAX TOOKER of KCEN-TV, master of ceremonies for the queen contest, talks with Lori McGregor, one of the junior queen candidates.

What About Social Security?

While congressional committees were axing slices of the Carter Energy Plan, the President was turning his priorities to revamping a social security system which otherwise is headed for disaster.

The President proposes that social security replenishment come from general revenue and higher employer participation.

Cong. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee already has gone on record saying that funding for social security out of general revenue is contrary to the philosophy, intent and perhaps the constitutionality of the system.

The business community, already matching the payroll contributions of employees, is certain to oppose a broader percentage participation beyond employees.

Polls show 33 million American elderly share genuine concern over the future of the system.

Actuaries anticipate the system running out of funds by the early 1980s if nothing more is done.

Insurance company spokesmen have said that use of social security funds in private retirement and benefit programs would benefit the retired, the elderly and disabled more than social security programs.

What continues to plague the system is the fact that millions have gotten "on" social security without the career contributions of tens of millions since World War II.

It was at one time possible to begin drawing social security after merely reporting four or more quarters of withholding. That means millions have received social security benefits without paying in the length of a career lifetime that most people have paid in the past 30 years.

Social Security Administration officials have to plumb the efficacy of the system in terms of the many things it now does in terms of what social security can afford to do, regardless of new funding to keep it solvent.

Not only Mr. Carter's energy plan will be attacked in congressional committees by special interests. Lobby groups for government employees, veterans groups, the elderly will descend on Capitol Hill when social security goes to committee.

The hard questions must be asked: How can someone draw out more than he or she has paid in? How can benefits continue to accrue to more people if a precedent-setting decision favors general revenue, which is already financed by the Washington deficit - oriented - money machine.

Not only the confidence of the elderly, the immediate beneficiaries, is at stake. The confidence in a system whose breakeven point is sometime between 1982 and 1985 is at stake. By that time, the numbers of retirees and other beneficiaries will be greater by millions.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill says the House will turn its energies to social security after the Carter Energy Plan clears House and Senate committees.

And what survives those committees for energy conservation may suggest what lies ahead for social security, a problem equally large enough to boggle the mind.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

FAKE ID CARDS ROB
SOCIAL SECURITY FUND

REP. HENRY J. HYDE
(Ill.) "...Today I am introducing comprehensive legislation to deal with a serious national problem that has gone unchecked for far too long: the criminal use of false identification...."

"There are social security recipients receiving several social security checks due to phony identification and impersonations. When asked what they are doing about prosecuting the culprits, Social Security Administration officials answered, 'We are not a law enforcement agency -- We are a social service agency, so we simply pick up the extra cards from the individuals who have more than their share.' More proof that crime pays and pays and pays...."

"The Social Security Administration by its own estimate reports that more than 4.2 million people have two or more social security numbers. No one knows how many of these are getting two, three, or more social security payments under false identifications...."

"Federal statutes which encourage false identification crimes. For example under Federal law 18 U.S.C. (42 U.S.S. 408) it is not illegal to manufacture or possess a counterfeit or altered social security card.

"In my remarks today, I have only skimmed the surface of the 800 page report submitted by the Federal Advisory Committee on False Identification. The problem is massive in scope dating back in the early 1920's...."

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT

President Carter's Message to the Senate includes 5 proposals: (1) Compensate the Social Security trust fund from the general revenues... (2) Remove the wagebase ceiling for employers... (3) Increase the wage base subject to the employee tax by $600 in 1979, 1981, 1983, and 1985... (4) Shift revenues from the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to Old Age, Survivors, and Disability Trust Funds... (5) Increase the tax rate on self-employed from 7 percent to 7.5 percent.

No one is proposing a massive clean-up of the over 4 million people who are "milking" the Social Security Trust Fund by stealing two, three, or more monthly payments. The Social Security Trust Fund leaks like a sieve.

Once Ruled In Indonesia

Hostages At Mercy Of Former Crack Troops

THE HAGUE

Reuter - The lives of 59 hostages held at gun point in the Netherlands are at the mercy of the people who once formed its crack colonial troops.

Courage, military toughness and loyalty made south Moluccan units the backbone of the colonial army which the Netherlands used to rule its East Indies empire, one Indonesia.

South Moluccan guerrillas have mounted a twin hostage operation because they believe that the mother country betrayed them 30 years ago and is still refusing to honor what they consider a sacred trust.

The Dutch authorities, now stubbornly playing a waiting game in their attempt to free the hostages, believe that the South Moluccans are living in a fantasy world if they think the Netherlands has the power to give them what they want, an island homeland independent of Indonesia.

It is four centuries since the first Dutch colonists to settle in the East Indies set in train the events which have flowered in the current hostage sieges of a hijacked express and a primary school in the Northern Netherlands.

The Dutch used a classic colonial tactic by relying on an ethnic and religious minority -- The south Moluccans are slightly Negroid in appearance and are staunch Protestants -- to police their predominantly Moslem empire in the far East.

The end of World War Two, in which the Japanese occupied the Dutch East Indies, unleashed a protracted and confused nationalist insurgency which led to the granting of full independence to Indonesia in 1949.

During the bloody pre-independence period the South Moluccans earned the hatred of the primarily Javanese nationalists by the ruthlessness with which they conducted anti-guerrilla operations on behalf of the Dutch.

The South Moluccans proclaimed their own independent republic but it was quickly smashed after Indonesian air force planes flattened its capital, Ambon, in 1951.

The remaining 3,500 South Moluccans in the colonial army refused to demobilize in Indonesia for fear of reprisals. The Dutch, stuck with the South Moluccans for better or worse, shipped them to the Netherlands in 1951 along with about 9,000 dependants.

If they hoped that the South Moluccans would get fed up with life in dreary barracks, in a cold, wet northern climate and drift back to Indonesia, they miscalculated. The South Moluccans stayed, and kept on stubbornly insisting that the Dutch has an obligation to restore their independence republic.

The Netherlands, trying painfully to rebuild its political and economic ties with its former colony, refused to try to put pressure on Indonesia on behalf of the South Moluccans. Indonesia said it would accept the South Moluccans back only if they renounced their dreams of independence.

So a deadlock was created which persists to this day.

The South Moluccans, who have grown to number about 40,000, were gradually resettled in New housing estates on the edge of many Dutch towns -- there is one close to the village school in Bovensmilde which was seized last month.

But they would not assimilate with the Dutch, as many other immigrants from the East Indies have done. They kept to themselves, clannish, in unofficially tolerated private armies for the day when they would once more be masters of their own fate.

The original South Moluccan contingent is old now and the authority of the traditional moderate leaders has skipped into the hands of youths who have never seen their homeland.

Often well-educated but unable to find jobs, they flirt with Marxism and study the Palestinian guerrillas as examples of how ruthless dedication and an eye for publicity can rivet public attention and achieve political ends out of proportion to the degree of force applied.

Debate Rages Over Rule In Africa

By Peter Mosley

JOHANNESBURG

Reuter - South Africa's white rulers have been thrown into tumultuous debate over the merest hint by a cabinet minister that the black man might one day share in government.

The suggestion came from Dr. Piet Koornhof, minister for national education and sport, Oxford-educated (A doctorate in Philosophy and a leading light of the Verligte (enlightened) wing of the government.

Two factors have lent special significance to Dr. Koornhof's oblique remark at an international conference in Cape Town that urban blacks in South Africa could be drawn into a "new dispensation".

1. A special cabinet committee is due to report soon on the possibilities of moving away from the present Westminster style of government.

2. Dr. Koornhof 51, is widely regarded as a leading contender for the top job should Prime Minister John Vorster step down.

There has been renewed speculation recently over the state of Vorster's health. Although only 61, he is known to suffer from high blood pressure and diabetes, and took his personal doctor with him on his recent visit to Europe.

The highlight of that visit, his meeting with Vice President Walter Mondale, has focused attention even more sharply, both abroad and at home, on the fact that South Africa cannot hope to win friends while it has its apartheid policy of separate racial development.

Thus the stage is set for reappraisal. But few if any observers expect swift, dramatic change.

The main idea emerging now is that South Africa ultimately might adopt a confederal or even federal system along the lines of the Swiss cantons, in which various race groups would enjoy local autonomy and be represented in a supra-national government.

Such a concept, fashionably labelled "plural democracy," has been extolled not only by Dr. Koornhof but also by Information Minister Connie Mulder and Foreign Minister Pik Botha, who is also leading the cabinet committee examining a future constitution.

Its advantage so far as the government is concerned is that confederalism would embrace rather than replace the present homelands policy, which is the cornerstone of apartheid. This Policy says that the Black man does not really belong in "White" South Africa but to one or other of the nine black homelands, allotted to the various tribal nations.

Vorster also put a damper on things by telling a radio interviewer that he did not see a Swiss canton system being introduced here in the near future.

Brezhnev Moving Steadily Into Role As Head Of Soviet State

By Robert Evans

MOSCOW

Reuter - Just over a week after the removal of President Nikolai Podgorny from the top Kremlin leadership, communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev is perceptibly moving into the role of the Soviet Union's head of state.

In the course of a visit to Moscow by Bulgarian leader Todor Zhivkov, signs rapidly mounted that the move against Podgorny was the prelude to the appointment of Brezhnev, 70, to the Presidency in addition to his party post.

At the same time other members of the Soviet Power elite aligned themselves publicly alongside him in an apparent demonstration that overall unity has been preserved and that the president stood, and fell, alone.

The 74-year-old Podgorny is still nominally head of state, but since he was voted out of the communist party's Politburo, the Kremlin inner cabinet, on May 24, he has dropped from sight and his political demise is apparently complete.

Within hours of his arrival Zhivkov, who himself combines the role of party chief and president, was referring to Brezhnev in a banquet speech as "the first party and state leader of the soviet Union."

Diplomatic analysts in Moscow said there seemed little doubt that Zhivkov, probably closer to the Kremlin than any other foreign communist leader, was aware of the significance of this formulation and had used it deliberately.

During the Zhivkov visit Brezhnev himself performed functions previously strictly reserved for Podgorny, including the presentation to the Bulgarian leader of an order of Lenin, the highest award the Kremlin can bestow.

It was during this ceremony, televised in its entirety across the country, that other senior members of the Politburo ranged around the party chief warmly applauded when the Bulgarian leader described him again as leader of the Soviet state.

Perhaps significantly, it was the tall, gaunt figure of 74-year-old Mikhail Suslov, long regarded by outside observers as the Kremlin's "King-Maker" that came close to dominating the scene despite Brezhnev's central position.

Standing between Suslov and the party leader was Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin, 73, who together with Brezhnev and Podgorny had formed the triumvirate at the summit of Soviet power since 1965.

The previous day, in another apparently conscious display of collectivity at the top, Kosygin joined Brezhnev in driving through Moscow in two open cars with their Bulgarian visitors to receive the applause of tens of thousands of people.

This occasion, an unusual one even in the Soviet context, was also televised live throughout the country with a repeat run during the evening. But it was on Brezhnev in the lead limousine with Zhivkov that attention was focused.

No official explanation has emerged why Podgorny was voted out of the Politburo at a plenary session of the party's 290-strong central committee after serving in the post for 11 years.

Although he has yet to be formally stripped of the presidency it is widely expected that this will come at a session of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament, which meets on June 16.

Western analysts say it now seems an even bet that the post will simultaneously be conferred on Brezhnev but there is still a strong feeling among foreign observers that this was not the original idea.

This weekend will see the publication of the draft text of a new Soviet Constitution, prepared by a commission working under Brezhnev and first set up in the early 1960's to replace the 1946 so-called Stalin constitution.

Soviet sources and Brezhnev himself have dropped broad hints that it will include provision for a head-of-state post similar to that in most other communist countries where, like Zhivkov, the party chief and president are the same man.

They carried nosegays of burnt orange satin roses and baby's breath tied with creme satin ribbon. These were designed and made by Gary Cone, brother of the bride.

Guy Condra of Austin was best man. Groomsman were Sam Paul brother-in-law of the groom and Gary Cone of Hereford, brother of the bride.

Flower girl was Beth Westbrook of Lubbock, niece of the bride. Brant Lee Westbrook of Lubbock, nephew of the bride served as ring bearer.

Ushers were Rob Davis, Marcelo Barba and Dough Bachman all of Austin.

Lane Peeler of Waco, cousin of the bride was candle lighter.

Brian Westbrook of Lubbock, nephew of the bride, handed out the scrolls and rice bags.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length dress of creme lace over orange lining and also wore full length creme gloves.

The mother of the groom wore a floor length dress of leaf green soft crepe with long sleeves and a draped neckline. They both wore corsages of orange craniads and stephenotis carrying out the colors of the bride.

Mrs. C.B. Moore Sr. of Cuero, grandmother of the groom also wore a floor length dress of pink. They wore corsages of creme craniads and stephenotis.

Mrs. Sue Bachman and Miss Laura Moore, sisters of the groom served at the brides table. Mrs. Pam Harbour of Austin and Miss Debbie Cone of Temple, cousins of the bride served at the grooms table.

The reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church following the ceremony.

The brides table was kidney shaped draped with a creme satin cloth with lace overlay. The centerpiece was an antique brass candle candelabra entwined with burnt orange roses, stephenotis and english ivy lighted by five orange tapers. The brides bouquet of a dozen orange roses, stephenotis entwined with english ivy and satin ribbon carried out the arrangement. The three-tier wedding cake was creme with tiny shells and love birds circling it. Touches of orange lent it color. A pair of love birds crowned the cake. The orange punch with ice ring of orange slices and mint was served from an antique crystal punch bowl.

The grooms table was round covered with satin cloth with lace overlay matching the brides. It was set with silver coffee service and a devils food cake with the names of the bride and groom inscribed.

The couple honeymooned in San Antonio, Brownsville, and Cuero. They will make their home in Austin where both are employed at the Capitol National Bank.

Summer Festival To Be Held June 24-25

A Czech pastry festival, an area wide art show, a street dance, tennis tournament, sailing regatta and a host of other entertainment and activities is slated for June 24-25 in a big Temple Summer Festival in honor of the city's 96th birthday.

The annual event, for the first time, will have an ethnic flavor with the Czech pastry festival on Saturday, June 25. Special support for the festival is being given by the Texas SPJST lodge.

Cash prizes of $100 for first place, $50 for second place and $25 for third place will be awarded in each of three divisions of Czechoslovakian and German dishes. These divisions include: Kolache, a meat or fruit filled pastry; Buchta, a poppy seed roll and strudel, a type of coffee cake. A $5 entry fee will be charged. There may be only one entry per person for each of the classes. No more than a half-dozen pastries may be entered in each class.

Entry blanks may be obtained from Jerry Gersbach, P.O. Box 441, Temple Texas 76501.

Judges for the pastry festival are Phil Hewitt from the Institute of Texas Cultures, San Antonio; Svatava Jakobson and Joel Cryer from the Center for Inter-cultural Studies in Folklore and Ethnomusicology, University of Texas in Austin. There will also be some local judges participating, said Gersbach.

Judging of the pastries will begin at approximately 10 a.m. inside the Gober Party House, he added.

A select group of 50 artists will display and sell their work during the two day event. Organizer of the art show, Grady Tyroch, has indicated that there will be a large assortment of excellent art on display ranging from oil paintings to wood carvings. The art show will be from 6-11 p.m., on Friday, June 24 and from 10 a.m., to 8 p.m. Saturday, June 25.

"Artists will be free to establish their own prices for their work. There will be no set limits. The full-time professional artists will; however, have more expensive work, but we should have price ranges which will appeal to everyone," said Tyroch.

At the same time these events are happening there will be continuous entertainment throughout the festival to meet a variety of tastes.

The Civic Chorus will provide a preview of their "Concert Under the Stars." The Boots and Slippers Club will present square dancing exhibitions and audience participations. The Central Texas Girl's Choir and Central Texas Boy's Choir will perform.

Other musical treats will include a polka band, barber-shop quartets and The Temple Jaycee Kazoo Band. For the kids, the CAC will present their Super Summer '77 Activities; On Saturday morning a magic show is scheduled.

Larry Neal, coordinator of entertainment for the festival said, "There will be acts going on all throughout the day. Because of the Pioneer Days Celebration at Temple Junior College, which will be going on simultaneously with the Temple Summer Festival, we plan to run buses back and forth so people can enjoy an even greater amount of entertainment."

Beat The Heat In Style

Beat the heat "in style" this summer... and save energy and water at the same time, says Margaret Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist.

"Fashion trends for summer '77 help with all three she says.

"In general, loose flowing styles are right for summer--and they are cooler than tightly fitted clothes.

"Cool styles and fabrics allow comfort at higher temperatures--and that saves on air conditioning needs.

Save even more energy and water by accumulating all these easy-care fabrics to launder as a "full load"--in cool water, she suggests.

Miss Vanderpoorten is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Start a summer wardrobe with sundresses in lightweight fabrics for a fashionable appearance--and a cool one, because most are designed to fit loosely, she says.

Crinkled cotton, cotton blends and very light-weight synthetic knits are good fabric choices, as well as energy savers because of their easy-care features.

Also, include catfans, full skirts and free-floating tops--to let even the slightest breeze be felt.

Made up in dish cloth or gauze fabrics they maximize the cooling effect. Again, no special care is needed for these garments.

Barefoot sandals--teamed up with other summer fashions--are the "bottom line" in keeping cool.

Good judgment is the passport to good driving.

Big Tractor Pull Set At Taylor Arena

On Saturday evening, June 18 at 7 p.m. approximately 40 tractors will be tuning up for the tractor pull in Taylor. The pull is sponsored by the Taylor Rodeo Association with special equipment and technical guidance of the Central Texas Tractor Puller Association. Tickets to both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon event are 2.75 in advance or $3 at the gate. What is a tractor Pull?

It's billed as the country's greatest demonstration of raw horse power anywhere. Big, souped-up, smoke-belching farm tractors will compete against each other trying to pull as much as 70,000 pounds of dead weight. These mammoth beasts roar down the dirt track.

SHOWN BEING MOVED with care is this 347-ton steel vessel that will house one of two nuclear reactors at Texas Power & Light Co.'s Comanche Peak generating facility near Glen Rose. The vessel was transported by barge and rail to the site.

Nuclear Power Plant Reactor Vessel On Way

A major component of Texas' first nuclear power plant is en route by rail to its permanent home at the Comanche Peak site, near Glen Rose. Texas Power & Light Co. officials said.

The 347-ton reactor vessel, a carbon steel cylinder, was more than two years in the making at Chattanooga, Tennessee. It arrived at Houston after nearly 1,600 miles travel by barge on the Tennessee, Ohio, and Mississippi Rivers and the Gulf Intercoastal Waterway.

When fully assembled the vessel will weigh 440 tons, be 44 feet long, and have an interior diameter of over 14 feet. The vessel walls are over eight inches thick.

The vessel will house the reactor and fuel for one of two generating units to be in operation at Comanche Peak. Unit #1 is scheduled for service in 1981. The second unit will be on line in late 1982. Each unit will have a generating capacity of 1,150,000-kilowatts.

A nuclear plant produces electricity in much the same way as does a conventional plant. The difference is the heat source. Nuclear fission produces the heat for turning water into steam. The steam spins the turbines for the generator.

The Comanche Peak facility is another step in Texas Power & Light's program to convert from natural gas and oil as boiler fuel for generating electricity. While a major portion of the electricity received by TP&L customers will be generated by lignite coal, in 1983, 1% of the power will come from the Comanche Peak facility.

Comanche Peak is being constructed jointly by Texas Power & Light and its affiliates, Texas Electric Service Company and Dallas Power & Light.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

RE: In response to Mondrik's letter to the editor.

Dear Frank,

Glancing through the Thursday edition of your paper I was attracted to Mrs. Mondrik's letter.

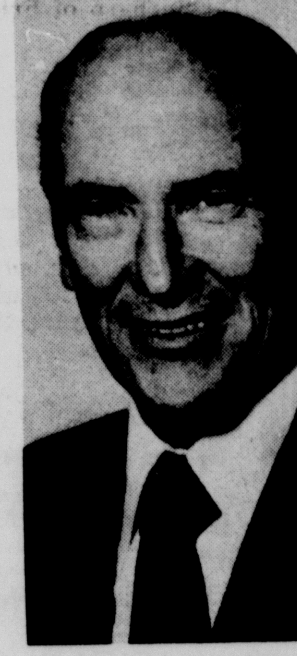

Being a former teacher it seems rather pathetic to see a teacher babbling. It continues to overwhelm me to read of the confrontation given between children-teacher and/or parent-teacher.

During my "formative" years I was taught responsibility to some degree, and when a teacher said to remove the papers from the locker... then marched to their tune.

I think your reading public is prescriptive enough to wade through the shallowness of the Mondrik letter to understand what her real complaint is.

That being a certain cheerleader being removed from that position because of moral reasons, this just became an avenue, I believe, to muddle a very fine school system.

Deserters Can Upgrade Discharges

Vietnam era Army deserters wishing to ask information or assistance in upgrading their discharges from less than honorable under President Carter's pardon plan may check into any military installation without fear of confinement of harassment whether he qualifies for pardon or not.

Federal law in regard to the special discharge review program states: "At no time will the deserter who voluntarily returns to military control, whether eligible or ineligible for the program, be placed under guard or in confinement while in the installation. Deserters will not be required to conform to military dress and grooming regulations."

Military installation commanders or their designates, when asked for assistance from a deserter, will contact by phone at the earliest possible time, the U.S. Army Deserter Information Point at Ft. Benjamin Harrison to determine eligibility. If the deserter qualifies for review he will be assigned a time and place to report for processing.

In cases where deserters from a different branch of service report into a base, post or station other than their own, contact will be made for them with the Joint Liaison Office Ins. Louis, Mo., for instructions. Deadline for filing application for discharge review is Oct. 4, 1977.

Gordon To Head TP&L Division

Mark W. Gordon of Irving has been named manager of Texas Power & Light Company's Southern Division with headquarters in Waco, J.F. Skelton, TP&L chairman and chief executive, announced.

Gordon succeeds Joe M. Nelson who had held the post since 1974. Nelson has been named manager of the company's public service department in Dallas.

Gordon received a B.S. degree from Texas A&M University in 1950. He joined Texas Power & Light in 1954 after military service. He worked as a farm service adviser from 1954 to 1957 when he joined the planning department. In 1962, he worked as training supervisor in the TP&L personnel department.

Gordon became assistant to district manager in Irving in 1963, moved to manager of the Dallas-Bedford office in 1965, and was named district manager in Irving in 1967.

Government Stops Game Hunting

By Jeremy Toye

NAIROBI

Reuter - The Kenyan government has ordered an end to big game hunting, dealing a death blow to one of Africa's most colorful leg-ends.

To track and kill a "big cat" or stand up to a charging rhinoceros was a major part of Kenya's attraction for hunters, most of them white foreigners, long before Ernest Hemingway immortalized it in literature.

But now, on the orders of Wildlife Minister Mathews Ogotu, all hunting is banned, gun licences are revoked and professional guides and their high-paying clients will have to make do with a camera.

Yet the 100 or more men who made comfortable livings by satisfying the killer instincts of some of the rich say Mr. Ogotu has aimed at the wrong target.

They and other more dis-interested observers argue that it is the hordes of poachers, who pay none of the hefty license fees, who are the real menace to one of the richest collections of wildlife in the world.

The government agrees and plans a major increase in anti-poaching units in the next few months with the help of 17 million dollars from the World Bank.

They also hint that steps may be taken to tighten up on curio shops selling game trophies which provide the main incentive for the poacher.

But the first shot was against the hunter, presumably because he was easiest to hit. In order to operate at all, the professionals spend much of their time preparing licences. One for a lion, for example, used to cost the equivalent of 880 dollars before the ban.

The government says it will lose about 4.2 million dollars in licence fees each year, but officials say this is a fair price to pay for the conservation of Kenya's heritage.

With clients willing to pay upwards of 6,000 dollars for a few weeks' safari, and with bookings running well into the year, the hunters stand to lose a lot because of the ban.

"What most people don't realize is that we are the people most interested in conservation" as we're planning for our own future for the next 40 years," commented one angry professional.

"The government should make a big effort to stop poachers," snapped a member of an African hunting team. "It's not necessary to close outfits like this."

With the government controlling the issue of the growing number of licenses, hunting could have been controlled without a total ban, they argue.

One tour operator could see two sides to the argument: "The poachers used to be scared by hunting camps all over the country," said Jock Anderson of the East African Wildlife Safari. "Now the camps will go and they will have a field day."

"On the other hand, licensed hunters were taking the best trophies, such as tusks and horns," he added. "Now we can expect to see the best-looking animals around."

A Wildlife Ministry spokesman reckoned that poaching and hunting accounted for one third of the wild animals killed in Kenya each year, with poaching taking much the bigger portion.

The other two thirds were victims of drought conditions which prevail in many parts of the country. There are high hopes this year that heavy rains which are causing havoc to the human population could help wildlife.

Ironically, that could lead to a situation where there are too many of a particular species of animal for the terrain, which will mean culling.

Some suggest that such a situation could mean hunting in limited form could return. But it will be many years before some species are safe. Black rhinos are now severely threatened, and where Kenya once had 120,000 elephants, it now has about 40 species listed as endangered.

One man who is particularly pleased is Ellis Monks local representative for the World Wildlife Fund who has actively campaigned for the ban.

He says it is essential to take stock of Kenya's wildlife before it is too late. If it then turns out that there is a place for the hunter, he may be allowed to return.

But it looks as if the days when a hunting party could hire a train on the Nairobi to Mombasa line and stop where they wanted, picking off game which crowded the plains, are gone.

The president of Game

THESE JAWS belong to a nine-year old hybrid bass that is a cross between a largemouth and smallmouth bass. Initial studies indicate that this hybrid bass will reproduce at a younger age and is more aggressive than its parents. Due to its aggressiveness, this hybrid has been nicknamed the meanmouth bass.

OUR AMERICAN HERITAGE

HOW TO STOP TERRORISM A NATIONAL THREAT

As far back as 1693 uniformed American policemen were protecting the rights of the populace. Since then, police departments have grown in skill and size until in a recent year the number of detectives and policemen numbered about 365,000. America's yearly police expenditure has been estimated to be around five billion dollars.

Many Americans don't realize that a good portion of this budget goes to protecting people from atrocities such as bombings, hijacking, terrorism and other brutal and cowardly forms of violence. Small terrorist groups have rejected the norms of civilized behavior. This year alone there have been 12 hijackings, 12 bombings and 19 kidnappings. Over 70 people lost their lives and more than 200 were injured.

For example, emigre fascist-ustashi terrorist groups which have been freely acting in some western European countries and countries in the American hemisphere for a full 30 years, constantly conspire against Yugoslavia. From Jan., 1967, up through Sept. 11, 1976, they made or attempted 17 attacks of subversion of terrorism within the U.S. alone.

On the night of Jan. 29, 1967, time bombs were planted simultaneously at six Yugoslav diplomatic or consular missions in the U.S. and Canada—in Washington, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Ottawa and Toronto. The perpetrators were caught and brought to court, but were acquitted on lack of evidence.

Six years later, on July 4, 1973, the shop window of a Cleveland store selling Yugoslav newspapers, books and other goods was shattered. Joza Misetic, Milan Butina and Petar Perun, leader of the three, all of them extremist emigres, were caught by police in the act.

On May 3, 1975, Ivan Lukic, Bozo Delava, Zvonko Luburic and others assaulted

M. Bulajic, Yugoslav Consul-General, and his wife at a party in New York. Legal proceedings, still underway, were begun only in this case. On June 23, 1975, a time bomb went off in front of the building of the Permanent Yugoslav Mission in the U.N. in New York. On Dec. 29, 1975, a plastic mine was planted in front of the home of the Yugoslav Consul in Chicago. The ensuing explosion claimed no victims. The terrorist was never identified.

On March 31 and on May 3, 1976, unknown criminals shattered the display window of the JAT offices in New York. Their identity remains unknown to the police.

A group of terrorists made of Zvonko Busic, his wife Julijana Schulz, Petar Matanic, Marko Vlasic and Frane Pesut hijacked a TWA passenger plane threatening the lives of 92 passengers. The hijackers reached Paris via Iceland and surrendered there on condition that the five biggest U.S. newspapers carry their communique in which they attacked Yugoslavia and demanded the restoration of the independent state of Croatia, a Nazi puppet state formed in occupied Yugoslavia during World War II in which the ustasias were the Croatian quislings put in power by the Nazis.

Before hijacking the plane, the group planted a bomb at a railroad station in New York together with their communique. A U.S. policeman was killed and another three were seriously injured while trying to defuse the mine. Our police are well equipped to cope with all kinds of terrorism and able to take effective action against it. Michael Codd, Police Commissioner of the City of New York, in an interview issued immediately after the hijacking of the TWA plane by ustashi terrorists stated, however, that the police department's "ability to surveil groups in general has been curtailed by various restrictions."

In a speech at the United Nations, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said "people expect that more stringent steps must be taken to fight the hijackers and terrorists in order to discourage similar actions in the future. Criminal acts against humanity, whatever the professed objective, cannot be excused by any civilized nation."

It is against atrocities like these that American police officers are defending American citizens and guests in this country who should be entitled to the freedom and safety for which this country is famous.

EXPLOSIVE FACT—Many police officers are employed to protect Americans and guests from abroad from terrorism.
